Federal Circuit. In re O'Farrell, 853 F. 2d 894 (Fed. Cir. 1988). Moreover, the randomized ang-2 binding peptides used in the claimed molecules have sequences that are not tied to the Tek sequence; as noted in the specification, they can result from such techniques as phage display technology, which starts with a library of random sequences rather than variations from a known sequence having the desired activity.

Finally, the Examiner's argument ignores that Cerretti et al. teach a limit of variation of 10 amino acids in the Tek polypeptide sequence. The soluble Tek polypeptide taught by Cerretti et al. has a sequence of hundreds of amino acids. So, in its teaching of variants, Cerretti et al. teach not only variation of up to 10 amino acids but also adherence to a sequence of hundreds of amino acids of the soluble Tek polypeptide. Thus, Cerretti et al. can be read as teaching away from the claimed invention, which relies on no adherence to the Tek sequence whatsoever.

Conclusion. In light of the foregoing amendments and remarks, the Applicants respectfully request reconsideration of the Office Action, entry of all amendments, and allowance of all claims.
